SURVEY SHOWS THE GREAT VALUE OF FARM PRODUCTS RAISED IN LEE COUNTY

Agriculture in Lee County Proves a Big Subject to be Covered in One Article—Figures are Interesting

PREAMBLE
This is the second of a series of industrial articles which will be published in the TELEGRAPH, one each week for fifteen weeks, for the purpose of outlining to our local people and the outside world the vast field of resources and opportunities existing here for advancement and for the promotion of optimism and the right psychology. The facts contained in these articles are absolutely reliable and have been gathered by an expert statistician.

The TELEGRAPH, throughout the period, will make an effort to show that there is not a section of the country in the central states that offers a wider field than this section of Illinois. Every phase of industrial life and business activity will be covered in these articles in a thoroughly and constructive manner.

The carry-out of this campaign has been made possible by many of the leading business institutions of this city. After reading this article, turn to the industrial page and see who these progressive firms are who have so willingly come to the assistance of this enterprise.

It is suggested that copies of these Tuesday issues be filed for reference or mailed to out-of-town friends or relatives that they may learn of the opportunities on this splendidly productive section.

THE B. F. SHAW PRINTING CO.

AGRICULTURE IN LEE COUNTY

(By V. S. Mullen)
"Truly man made the city, and after he had become sufficiently civilized, not afraid of solitude and knew on what terms to live with nature, God promoted him to life in the country."—John Burroughs.

There is not something irresistible in that call to the open, to the great outdoors, whither is to be had freedom and independence, and so much desire, and sought after? Does not the desire of the man who has no fear to have the true measure of his worth taken answer to the "back to the land" call where he can find an atmosphere exhilarating and healthful?

In searching for these conditions the early settlers found them in the great areas of the central west, where for several generations their posterity has been occupied with the development of this great region, making it yield its store of hidden wealth to a man's benefit, where Mother Nature, as a rich benefactress, is always ready to bestow her gifts upon the appreciative and worthy.

City Life Suffers.
Let the picture of farm life be compared with that of the crowded metropolis, with its artificiality written on its skyline and its pavement. Where "flat life," with its high rents and general congested conditions, fights for existence in an atmosphere polluted with the poison gases of manufacture. Here may be found the man who has held down the same position for years, riveted so to his work that his scope of observation of the great outdoors has been limited to a couple of weeks vacation in the country or to the glimpses of the "movie screen" of that which he envies.

What he accomplishes is seldom worth the sacrifice. It is the same old grind and the same old routine, with nearly every part of the monthly salary going to present-day maintenance. Here is a cog in the great commercial wheel and one who has failed to give his true condition just and proper consideration.

With an equal loyalty to his daily pursuits and with the same amount of energy displayed as in the city, this same man could reap many of the advantages of life and attain more independence by becoming a producer—a farm owner. Having decided to do this, it is but for him to look around for a location. The following summary of crop conditions in Lee County shows a comprehensive manner that northern Illinois offers just as attractive possibilities for intensified and diversified farming as is to be found anywhere in the United States. Here the farmer does not depend upon one crop production alone and gamble his finances and labor upon the success of reaping a large yield of wheat, but rather, he diversifies his labors, and, by planting a variety of products, he is always sure of reaping enough returns so the "total failure" is a forgotten word in connection with Illinois farming.

124,880 Acres in County.
Lee County comprises 474,580 acres of land in north western Illinois, one of the richest farming counties in the world. The general characteristics of the surface are similar to that of all of northern Illinois. The soil in general is quite deep, is dark and rich and is excellent for the growth of all the cereals. The surface is gently rolling with bluffs along the river banks with some swamp and a few sandy areas. But only in a very few places is the land absolutely sterile. Even these spots by careful cultivation and drainage, have been greatly improved and have been made to take their place under the modern methods of intensified and diversified farming.

Who Does The Farming.
Of the 474,880 acres of the county, 392,855 acres are under cultivation, 16,625 acres are in woodland, while 6,500 acres are not as yet available for either. The total amount is divided into 2,592 farms averaging about 180 acres to the farm. These farms are operated by 1,176 owners, 1,374 tenants and 41 farm managers. This ratio of renters to owners in Lee County is unusual, the farms operated by tenants numbering far more than is prevalent throughout the north-west.

The county is so situated geographically that all the crop products which are native to the temperate zone grow and mature profusely. The major crops are corn, oats, wheat, rye and clover. 374,503 acres are devoted to the production of major crops and 51,294 acres to hay and forage. The figures do not include smaller acreages for minor crops such as potatoes, cow peas, soy beans, etc.

Staggering Corn Crop.
Lee County produces approximately 8,225,000 bu. of corn from the 141,639 acres planted to that crop. Corn is assuming a more important position each year which is as it should be for the agricultural future of Lee County seems toward dairying and stock raising as the more profitable enterprises.

Oats for feed is also an important crop in this county having the second largest acreage of all grain crops. 56,921 acres were planted to oats last year from which were harvested 3,434,000 bushels.

Wheat ranks third in importance with 26,391 acres devoted to it, from which were produced 367,528 bushels of wheat, 305,000 bushels of which were winter wheat and 62,528 bushels were spring wheat. Rye is a fairly important crop and there were 170,200 bushels produced from 11,887 acres planted to it last year, while there were 7,609 acres planted to barley with a yield of 268,120 bu.

Important Forage Crops.
The forage crops play an important part and augment the development of the dairying and stockraising industries. In this respect, Lee County is well situated as these crops grow profusely. According to the latest figures there is a total of approximately 60,000 acres devoted to hay and forage crops. Of this amount, 11,592 acres are planted to timothy alone; 22,111 acres to clover and timothy mixed; 2,672 acres to clover alone, the balance of the total amount being made up of wild grasses and various legume crops including about 5,000 acres of alfalfa. A concerted effort is being made to encourage the growing of more alfalfa in recognition of its value as an aid in developing the dairy industry. The soil analysis of this county shows that parts of it are well adapted to the growing of this great crop of all dairy forage without the use of limestone. However, other sections must be limed before planting and during the past year more than sixty carloads of limestone were distributed through the Lee County Farm Bureau for this purpose.

Value of Crop at Million.
According to the latest official estimates compiled under state supervision, a total value of all farm crops produced in Lee County is estimated at approximately $5,032,753.00.

Fruit in on Increase.
While the fruit industry is of minor importance it is growing year by year. The last census showing that 90 acres were in small fruits from which 110,000 quarts of berries were marketed and that there was a total of 45,022 fruit trees in the county. With the coming of more intensified farming

FATHER HELD FOR DEATH OF HIS BABY BOY

Milwaukee Man Faces Charge of Poisoning His Son.

BULLETIN.
By Associated Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—Arthur O. Hauschild arraigned in district court here, charged with first degree murder in connection with the death of his son, Roy, three year old heir to an estate valued at $15,000, entered a plea of not guilty through his attorney. The court refused to admit the prisoner to bail and continued the hearing until February 3.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Milwaukee, Wis., Jan. 20.—Arthur Hauschild today on the charge of murder growing out of the death of his three-year-old son, Roy, who died from poisoning.
Hauschild was arrested late yesterday on a charge of murder following a week's investigation into the death of the child. Before the arrest, Hauschild and his wife, the step-mother of the dead boy, were called to the office of the district attorney and questioned. The woman was permitted to go to her home but Hauschild was served with the warrant and taken to police headquarters.

An analysis of a saliva found in the Hauschild home showed presence of a small quantity of poison. A little of the saliva had been taken from the container but not enough from the container to account for the quantity of poison found in the child's body.
No substance found in the house contained poison in any quantity. The child was heir to about $15,000 left in trust for him by his mother who died in 1923. In the event of the child's death the bequest provided the estate was to go to Arthur Hauschild.

Promise of Non-Partisan Administration in Germany
Berlin, Jan. 19.—The Associated Press—The promise of a non-partisan administration of Germany's affairs and an apparent desire to establish a truce among the warring political factions by proclaiming a platform which affords few if any points for attack were the cardinal features of Chancellor Luther's inaugural statement to the Reichstag last evening.
On paper, the new cabinet's program gives neither the socialists nor nationalists tangible ground for carping criticism.

MRS. ED CAMP, FORMER DIXON LADY, IS DEAD

Passed Away in Chicago; Funeral in Dixon Tomorrow.

Mrs. Thomas Morgan 510 Peoria ave. this morning received the sad news of the death of her sister Mrs. Edmund Camp, for many years one of Dixon's most prominent and beloved women, at her home in Chicago. Death was the result of stomach trouble, with which she has suffered since Thanksgiving.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at Mrs. Morgan's home, Rev. A. B. Whitcomb officiating and burial in Oakwood.

Mrs. Camp was a member of one of Dixon's pioneer families, and during her long life here, which extended until about five years ago, when she moved to Chicago, she was a leader in the intellectual and social life of the community, being a woman of unusually fine attainments. For many years her husband was engaged in the furniture business in Dixon, the family being prominent in many ways.

Her many friends will remember her as one whose sweet personality made itself manifest in countless ways and will tender sincerest sympathy to the bereaved daughter, Miss Bess, and sister, Mrs. Morgan.

CHIROPRACTOR HELD AS HEAD ROBBERS' GANG

Alleged Loot in Past Month Totals Over Hundred Thousand.

Chicago, Jan. 20.—Dr. Percy Poe, practicing chiropractor, was held today as the alleged leader of a robber band which police said has stolen jewelry and money valued at $100,000 within the past month.

Several victims of robberies have identified Poe and three men held as his alleged confederates, according to police.

One robbery of a pawn shop, they are charged with committing, netted a half bushel of watches, jewelry and money valued at a total of $20,000. Because the watches were initialed, they threw them into the Chicago river, one of the men confessed.

After Poison Liqueur
Meanwhile deaths from poison whiskey drinking and automobile accidents, caused renewed police efforts against bootleggers and speeders. Drinking fatalities since Jan. 1, numbered 14 and auto deaths reached 20 in the same time today.
Mrs. Margaret Minella, 23, alleged to have sold the moonshine liquor which killed Riley Woods, 18, and may cause the death of Frank Sullivan, 29, was held on a murder charge. A jury last night found Joseph F. Kyle, wealthy real estate dealer, guilty of manslaughter, with an automobile in connection with a death in an accident last summer.

To Check on Police
Judges of the municipal court last night adopted a rule requiring that a complete stenographic report be made of all police court trials to prevent the habit of policemen failing to present all the evidence and then placing blame for acquittal on the judges. It also would check on the judges and prosecutors, he said.

Commenting on a report of the Chicago Critic, which said that more than 200,000 persons were discharged of 276,000 arrested, the judges said the police wasted time on trivial offenses and promiscuous raiding instead of concentrating on major crimes.

Judge Curran of the municipal court, trying a case yesterday in which representatives of welfare and reform organizations appeared as state's witnesses, dismissed the case with the declaration that the witnesses were lying. Later he advocated barring newspaper men from court rooms.

Amboy Owls Had Wings Clipped Monday Night

(Telephone Special Service)
Amboy, Jan. 20.—The Amboy Owls basketball team had their wings clipped last evening when the Rockford Hurons defeated them on the local floor by a score of 33 to 14. The Hurons started off at the first whistle and commenced piling up points. Driscoll caging five baskets in the first half alone. The Owls tried repeatedly to assemble their attack and overcome the lead Rockford had secured but were unequal to the occasion. Rosier managed to score eight points for the locals and Vaughan, Welty and Whitcomb added two each. The lineup:
Amboy Owls—Vaughan, rf; Foley, lf; Rosier, c; Welty, rg; Whitcomb, lg.
Rockford Hurons—Baldwin, rf; B. Edwards, Schmidt, lf; Driscoll, c; H. Larson, d; Edwards, rg; N. Larson, lg.

INDICATED IN QUESTIONS TO PETIT JURORS

Slow Progress is Being Made in Murder Case in Circuit Court

Insanity and self-defense will be the keystones in the defense that Attorney John Erwin will present to the jury in his effort to save young Gilbert E. Durin, 23-year-old Steward boy, from the penitentiary. In the manslaughter trial in the Lee County Circuit Court this week. Injuries to young Durin, one recently when he was held up and beaten over the head in Chicago and sent to a hospital, and an accident when he was a little fellow, when he fell through a register in a room at their home and dropped to the floor below, striking on his head, will be cited to strengthen the contention that the boy was not sane and was not responsible when he grabbed the shot-gun and killed his father Dr. James Durin, in their home in Steward last fall.

The defense will also offer evidence to the effect that the father was about to attack the boy with a dangerous weapon and that he acted in self-defense when he fired the fatal shot. This line of defense was indicated by the questions Attorney Erwin put to prospective jurors and also by the defense attorney in an interview with a Telegraph reporter.

Making Slow Progress.
Attorney Mark C. Keller, who has charge of the prosecution, could give no close estimate of the number of witnesses he will call, as that depended upon the developments of the trial, but he will combat the insanity and self defense angles of the case.

Slow progress is being made in the selection of a jury. In the Circuit Court this morning, with Judge Wm. Emerson presiding, Attorney Erwin examined some 21 prospective jurors, rejecting all but one. Most of the candidates disqualified themselves by declaring they had formed an opinion as to the merits of the case which would take evidence to remove.

Four Men Accepted.
Of the 24 men brought in yesterday afternoon, only four were accepted. They were:

Albert R. Froede, Palmyra, Waite Seybert, So. Dixon, Erwin Keithley, Dixon, Harry Barnes, May.

This is the net result of the examination of fifty. Hope of securing a jury today waned as the forenoon dragged along and the venire brought in by the sheriff last night was exhausted. Sheriff Risley started out again this morning to subpoena a new group of candidates.

Defendant Interested.
While Attorney Erwin questioned jurors, the young defendant, a mild enough appearing lad, dressed in a dark blue suit, sat behind his attorney and appeared to take a keen interest in the proceedings.

The boy's mother and his aunt sat far back in the court room, where the mother, widowed by the tragedy in their home, now seeking to save, if she can, her boy, sits with bowed head and face shielded by her hand.

Calls Thousand Feet of Water a Second Enough

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Jan. 20.—A delegation from the Chicago sanitary district commission was on hand today for the resumption of hearings before a special Senate committee on the McCormick bill proposing construction of a deeper St. Lawrence to the gulf waterway.

Major General Taylor, chief of army engineers, took the stand at the outset of the hearing and said army engineers have agreed for years that 1,000 cubic feet per second diversion from Lake Michigan would be adequate for the navigation of the Illinois river.

A channel nine by 200 feet from Utica to Cairo, he said, had been variously estimated to cost from $1,199,000 to $5,591,000 depending on the method adopted.

Former Palmyra Boy is Prospering in the West

A recent letter from Roy E. Swigart of Montague, Calif., says California was extremely dry last year, but that the winter has brought many rains and Californians are now hoping that the snow from the mountains will insure ample water for irrigation. The writer has been delightful, he says, the coldest being eight degrees above zero. Mr. Swigart, who is a former Palmyra boy, has resided in California for some years and is president of the Shasta Valley Chamber of Commerce.

MUCH SICKNESS IN DIXON NOW, DOCTORS STATE

Hardly a Family in Which There Isn't Some One Ill.

There is hardly a home in Dixon in which there is not some form of sickness. While there is a comparatively small amount of quarantinable cases, the number of cases of colds and grippe is said to far exceed the average of many years past. Physicians, many of whom are suffering from colds themselves, are taxed to the limit answering calls where hard colds have made it necessary for the patient to go to bed and summon medical aid. City Health Physician Dr. J. B. Warren reported today that there are six cases of scarlet fever under quarantine in the city. These are said to be of a mild type and are the same as those prevalent throughout the state of Illinois. The health officer stated that while there were hundreds of cases of colds and grippe, that the general condition of public health in the city at this time of year, was very good.

GREAT FOOD SHOW IS OPEN; CROWDS WILL SEE DISPLAY

Children Saw Exhibits This Afternoon; Is Best Held Here.

The fourth annual pure food show under the auspices of the Dixon Chamber of Commerce opened at 2:00 o'clock this afternoon in the Countryman Building and hundreds of visitors were on hand to view the greatest show that Dixon has ever had. The school children were admitted free this afternoon and they began coming early and the exhibitors were busy seeing that they were all taken care of, nothing being left undone for their complete entertainment.

The doors will open again tonight at 7:00 o'clock and the management has arranged to take care of the great crowd that is expected, for there seems to be an unusual interest in the pure food show. At the orchestra will be present and furnish music throughout the entire evening. Other forms of entertainment have been provided. Mayor Palmer will formally open the show with a brief address of welcome. Reverend Prentiss Hovey Case of the First Presbyterian church will give a talk that the listeners will long remember. Dr. Case always has an interesting message to deliver to any audience.

The Goddess of Supplies arrived this afternoon and brought from understore the largest list of supplies that she has ever brought to any pure food show. The goddess will gaze in to the mystic churn every afternoon and night and distribute her wares to the many people that attend this big food show.

Amboy Engineer Passed Away in South Saturday

W. A. Gascoigne, well known Amboy locomotive engineer and father of Mrs. Arthur Gaul, of Dixon, passed away Saturday at Biloxi, Miss., where he went in the fall in an effort to regain his failing health, his son Guy and wife being with him at the time of his death. They will take his body to Amboy, where funeral services will be held at Vaughan's Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Burial will be at the M. E. church officiating and with burial in Prairie Rest cemetery.

Mr. Gascoigne was born in England and was past 72 years of age at the time of his passing, most of his life in this country having been spent in Amboy. His wife, one daughter and one son preceded him in death, his surviving children being five sons and two daughters: Guy, Joe, Fred, Lloyd and Harry all of Amboy; Mrs. Arthur Gaul, of Dixon and Mrs. Al Courtney, of Amboy. He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers of Peoria and was well liked by all who knew him.

Roof Fire at Jake Trouth Home Early This Morning

Sparks from an overheated chimney set fire to the roof of the Jacob Trouth home, 116 Noble avenue this morning at 9:30. The fire department was called and extinguished the flames with chemicals. The damage to the property was covered by insurance.

HOOVER TELLS GOVERNMENT VIEWS CONCERNING BETTER CONDITIONS FOR FARMERS

Secretary of Agriculture Outlines His Department's Ideas on Subject to President's Agricultural Committee

Washington, Jan. 20.—Declaring that the first thing needed in aid of the American farmer is a "positive long-viewed policy for better settling of agriculture in our whole national economy," and that "generally the fundamental needed is a balancing of agricultural production to our home demand," Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, today stated the views of the Department of Agriculture in the following communication to President Coolidge's Agricultural Committee.

I have been requested by this Commission to state the views of the Department of Commerce upon the agricultural problem. As about 60 per cent of our commerce and industry revolves around the production of American farms, it is obvious that the welfare of the commercial and industrial activities of our country is closely interlinked with the welfare of our agriculture. Every segment of our economic life is interdependent. The farmer is as much interested in the price of what he buys as he is in the price of what he sells. Therefore, the Secretary of Commerce is as deeply interested in the commercial phases of agriculture as he is interested in any branch of industry, finance, or transportation.

Farmers' First Need.
As for myself, after seven years of constant study and practical dealing on an unprecedented scale with the broad economic currents of production and distribution, I have the conviction that the first thing needed in aid of the American farmer is a positive long view national policy for better settling of agriculture in our whole national economy. If we could determine what were the long view policies then emergency policies could be better directed to these ends.

Generally the fundamental need is a balancing of agricultural production to our home demand. That problem is not the farmer's alone. It touches every class. Everyone suffers because of the lack of balance in agriculture. We import agricultural products that we could better produce at home. We export foodstuffs and other agricultural products. Our farmers are caught both ways. They suffer in both directions from competition of cheaper labor and lower standards of living abroad.

For the first time in our history our physical and economic situation permits us to look forward to this balance being attained. The combined growth of our population and the practical limits on extension of agricultural areas make such a policy within the region of practical possibility.

Produce Must be Valued.
But to balance agriculture definite steps are necessary. Farmers' products must be given the same value in tariff for stimulation of domestic production as has been the case in industry. We can build up a higher standard of living and therefore larger consumption of agricultural products at home by a nationally organized drive to better efficiency in our whole production and distribution system and the elimination of its great wastes. In this manner agriculture can be lifted into its balanced place.

Farmers from the beginning, have constantly been troubled with economic crises for which they seek panaceas. This same situation obtained with periodic panics and bankruptcies in our banking systems up to a few years ago. Then we took the long view and set up under the Federal Reserve Act a system for preventing crises and so did away with much of the need of emergency action. So in the agricultural industry we need to set up a policy that will as far as possible avoid the constant recurring of crises and the recurrent need of emergency action for the farmers.

I have no intention of going into all the questions that are before your commission but to direct myself to an amplification of what I believe is the underlying problem. And this problem revolves at every step the relation of agriculture to other branches of commerce and industry. Balancing Agricultural Production to Effective Home Demand.

The first effort should be to strive so far as we can to such a balancing of our national development as will produce for our farmers in increasing degree, a domestic market and thus steadily advance his freedom from a tortuous dependence upon world prices through exports, and we should do it in such a fashion that we will

New York, Jan. 20.—Stock prices drifted irregularly lower at the opening of today's market, which was forced to contend with additional selling orders. Large blocks of the oil shares were turned over with Corden under pressure, on reports of new financing. Spirited bidding for New York Central was renewed, the initial transaction being 3900 shares at 123½ up ¼.

The downward trend was accelerated when recognized leaders such as U. S. Steel and American Can extended their declines to nearly a point. Coppers were shaded despite the resumption of dividends by Calumet. Rails generally were heavy, St. Paul preferred reacting after sharp run up in yesterday's late trading. Nash Motors sold at 28½, with deductions of six per cent for dividends. Delaware & Hudson, General Electric and Kansas City Southern showed independent strength. Foreign exchanges opened irregular.

Further unsettlement took place in the morning market on liquidation inspired by commission house advices urging a lightening of long accounts. Reactions of one to three points were scattered throughout the list but trading was only moderate in volume. The decline halted temporarily by the sudden revival of a demand for U. S. Steel common which was taken in round amounts at advancing prices. Independent strength was shown by the local traction, Standard rails lost ground despite publication of an unusually favorable car loading report and free offerings were noted in American Can, Baldwin and Radio. Call money renewed at 3 per cent.

NOT ONE JUROR SECURED MONDAY IN LINCOLN CASE

Men Say They Are Suspicious of Defense of "Insanity."

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Geneva, Ill., Jan. 20.—So many of the second venire of 100 drawn for the Warren J. Lincoln murder jury have said they are "suspicious of insanity as a defense" not a juror was obtained in the examination yesterday.

Four who were in jury box Saturday, were all that had been accepted by both sides as the selecting of the twelve men was resumed today. The proceedings were so uninteresting to Lincoln he dozed at intervals. He was not so sleepy, however, but that he led in a laugh at State's Attorney C. L. Abbott's expense which was provoked by a question put to a jury prospect by N. J. Aldrich of counsel for Lincoln.

"Do you know the State's Attorney?" Mr. Aldrich asked.

"Yes."

"How long?"

"Nine years."

"Where did you meet him?"

"At a picnic."

"And he made a speech?"

"Yes sir."

"And you have had an opportunity to vote for him three times?"

"I have had the opportunity to vote for, or vote against him."

Lincoln Had Laugh.

There was emphasis on the "opportunity to vote against" and Lincoln threw back his head and laughed.

The State's Attorney joined in the laughter.

The juror was later excused.

Fine Musical to Be Heard at Elks Club

An attraction of unusual interest is the Golden Gate Concert company, a de luxe musical organization, which will appear on the Elks entertainment course here tomorrow evening.

The program presented by this distinctive five-person company includes a novel combination of the tuneful melodies of Hawaii and selections from American and European classical and semi-classical music, as well as high-grade popular numbers.

The Hawaiian ukulele, steel guitar, banjo, mandolin, violin and piano are used in instrumental solos, duos, trios, quartets and ensemble numbers. Vocal selections add still further variety.

Miss Kathryn Pulley, a petite young lady whose real musical ability is aided and abetted by her beauty and charm, is the featured artist of the company. Her ukulele solos have proved a surprise and delight to music critics and the public. In her hands, the ukulele, one of the simplest of instruments, is played with such artistry that its tones bear a close resemblance to those of the violin and cello.

The Golden Gate Concert company, in its clever, artistic program offerings, makes an instantaneous appeal to audiences everywhere.

HOUSEHOLD SUGGESTIONS REMOVES STAINS

Very strong ammonia water will

Remove iodine from clothing or from the hands.

STEWING MEATS
In stewing meats add water from time to time, enough to keep the meat covered. If the broth should be too watery, boil it down before pouring it over the meat.

WARM LEFT-OVER
If you have any cold lean meat left after a meal you can utilize it for lunch by warming it in gravy or sauce sufficient to moisten it, and spread it on slices of crisp toast.

TO WATER FERNS
Wet the earth around ferns every three or four weeks with water in which a little household ammonia has been added in the proportion of a teaspoonful to a quart. This will keep them green and glossy.

STIR WITH CANDLE
Stir your boiled starch two or three times with a paraffin candle if you want your starched pieces to be particularly glossy and smooth.

TO STIFFEN LACE
To stiffen white lace dip it in skim milk before you press it.

TABLE LINEN
When laundering table linen do not put it through the wringer as that makes creases it is almost impossible to remove with the iron.

IMPROVES FLAVOR
A little ginger and a few cloves

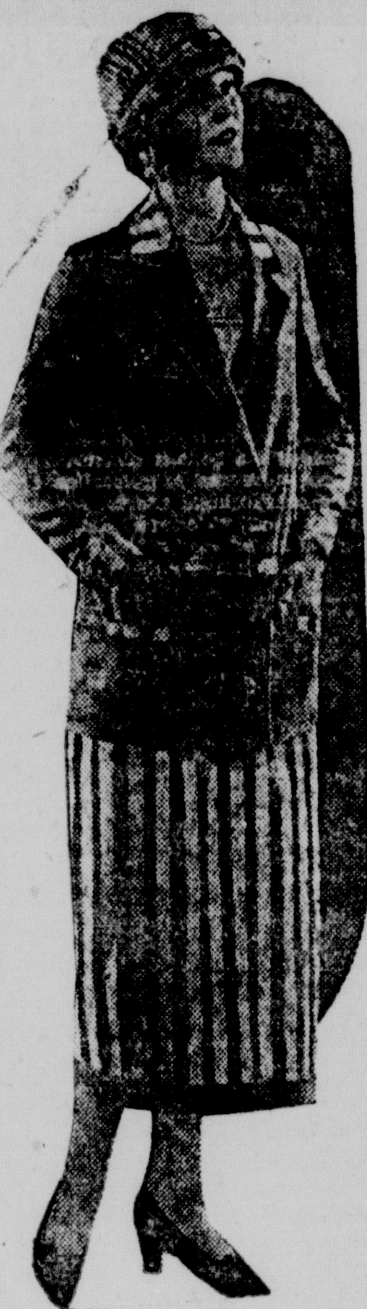

added to the water in which you boil corned beef will improve the flavor.

W. R. C. TO INSTALL OFFICERS THURSDAY

Public installation of officers of Dixon W. R. C. No. 218, Auxiliary to the G. A. R. will be held at G. A. R. hall Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. All friends of the Corps are invited to attend.

SPRING SUIT

The combination of plain and figured materials is one frequently met with in spring fashions. Here is a typical spring suit with striped skirt and plain coat trimmed with the plaid. The coat could be worn very nicely with a white silk skirt while the skirt would look very attractive with a sweater jacket. So it is a valuable addition to any wardrobe.

Menus for a Family

Tested by C. SISTER MARY

Breakfast—California grapes, cereal, thin cream, scrambled eggs on milk toast, syrup, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—Tomato bouillon toast sticks, lettuce sandwiches, chocolate soufflé, milk, tea.

Dinner—Split pea soup, broiled lamb chops, potatoes baked with cheese, carrot straws, orange salad, whole wheat bread, currant jelly, cottage cheese, milk, coffee.

The dessert suggested for luncheon is really the "heart" dish of the meal.

The tomato bouillon should be made with a strong stock.

The lettuce sandwiches should be carefully made, using crisp, well dried lettuce sprinkled with a simple boiled dressing between well-buttered slices of whole wheat or graham bread.

Scrambled Eggs on Milk

Toast
Five slices whole wheat toast, 2 cups top milk, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 tablespoon flour, 1½ teaspoon salt, 5 eggs, ½ tablespoons hot water, salt and pepper, 4 tablespoons grated cheese.

Sauté milk. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add hot milk, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pour over hot buttered toast. Beat eggs slightly with salt, pepper and water. Pour into a hot buttered frying pan and stir constantly with a fork until beginning to set. Pour over hot milk toast, sprinkle with grated cheese and put in a hot oven to finish cooking the eggs and melt the cheese.

Chocolate Soufflé
Two tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup milk, 2 squares Baker's chocolate, 1½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons hot water, 3 eggs, 1 teaspoon vanilla, few grains salt.

Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add milk, stirring constantly. Cook until boiling point is reached. Melt chocolate over hot water with hot water. Add sugar and stir until smooth. Add chocolate mixture to first mixture. Blend well and add yolks of eggs beaten until thick and lemon colored. Let stand until cool. Beat whites of eggs until stiff and dry on a platter, using a wire whisk. Beat in salt and vanilla and fold into cooled mixture. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake 25 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve at once with whipped cream.

Potatoes Baked With Cheese
Six cups diced potatoes, 1½ cup grated cheese, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 cup coarse stale bread crumbs, salt and pepper.

Cook potatoes in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Put a layer of potatoes in a well-buttered baking dish sprinkle with cheese, season with salt and pepper and add another layer of potatoes. Continue layer for layer until all is used. Melt butter, stir in crumbs and sprinkle potatoes with buttered crumbs. Cover dish and bake 10 minutes in a moderate oven. Remove cover and bake until crumbs are brown.

Ladies Guests of M. E. Men Monday Eve

The members of the Men's club of the Methodist church entertained their ladies last evening at the annual banquet and program, which was of exceptional merit. A delicious chicken supper was served at 6:30, during which the brass quartette furnished several selections.

Following the repast, A. E. Marth, president of the club, explained the plans and purposes of the organization. He was followed by Rev. Aubrey Shannon Moore, pastor of the church, who introduced the speaker of the evening, Rev. Ernest Ray O'Neill, pastor of the Olivet Methodist church, Chicago, who spoke on the subject, "Seers of Visions."

To listen to this talk was indeed a rare treat and while the speaker is by no means a stranger in Dixon, he was most enthusiastically received and his address, which was far too brief, proved a most suitable one for this occasion. Dr. O'Neill dwelt on the natural, every day traits of character and reputation, defining both of these in a careful manner and closing his remarks with a plea for a greater patriotism.

G. R. C. CLASS TO GIVE BANQUET IN FEBRUARY

Twenty-two members of the G. R. C. were in attendance at the meeting held at the home of Mrs. C. C. Buzzard Monday evening, at which time the class voted to hold a banquet, Feb. 23, to which the husbands and friends of the members will be invited. The class also extended an invitation to the Lutheran church orchestra to give a concert at the Evangelical church sometime in February, the date to be decided upon later. After the business meeting the members were given cross word puzzles, made up of the names of the members, to solve. Refreshments, served by the hostess completed a very pleasant evening.

INFORMAL DANCE AT ELKS THURSDAY EVE

Mississippi Valley Ball League in Meeting Today

Moline, Ill., Jan. 20.—(By The Associated Press)—Club owners of the Mississippi Valley League went into session at 1 p. m. today to elect a successor to President M. H. Sexton and adopt a schedule for the 1925 season.

President Sexton, head of the organization since it was formed in 1922, declined to serve another term because of his duties as president of the National Association of minor leagues demands all of his time.

William Reed, publisher of the Waterloo, Iowa, Tribune, and Belden Hill retiring president of the Cedar Rapids Iowa, club, are the candidates mentioned to succeed Sexton. Reed is a member of the league board of directors and also a director of the Waterloo club. Hill is a pioneer in minor league baseball, having been connected with the game for nearly forty years as a player, manager and club president. He is now serving as vice president of the league.

Indications are that the 1925 season will be the most successful since the organization of the circuit. The club owners will give consideration to two schedules, one calling for 140 games and another of 126 games. The season will open either May 1 or 3, depending on the schedule adopted.

MUNN'S VICTORY TO HELP MAT GAME

CHAMPION WAYNE MUNN AS WRESTLER AND BEAU BRUMMEL.

BY ART CARLSON

The rather startling defeat of Ed "Strangler" Lewis, heavyweight wrestling champion, at the hands of Wayne "Big" Munn, former Nebraska football luminary, was the best thing that could happen to the game.

The mat pasture, during the last few seasons, has been in a tottering state. It has been anything but popular with the sporting fraternity in general. In the main it has been about the least attractive of any sport on the old calendar. Wrestling seemed to be doomed unless a big upheaval was to come.

One reason for this was the so-called "wrestling trust" which has ruled the game for the past six years or so. The "circle" during that span has had a monopoly on the title. Besides Lewis, it included Joe Stecher, Earl Caddock and the Zbyzsko boys, Stanislaus and Viadek.

The county is being recognized as being advanced in the class of improvements. The importance of providing pleasant home surroundings for the younger generation as an additional inducement to them to remain on the farm is not being overlooked by the parents of children in Lee County, and some of the finest homes in the county with all modern improvements will be found on the farm. The total value of all farm property in the county is $114,197,350.00, of which $89,988,854.00 is the value of the land, $13,190,663.00 the value of farm buildings, $3,570,256.00 the value of implements and machinery and $7,447,277 the value of all livestock.

Since 1919 when Stecker grabbed the honors, the championship revolved itself into a virtual round-robin affair. Outsiders, with the exception of acknowledged second-raters, could not break in; couldn't get a match. The "trust" simply had a corner on the honors and turned a deaf ear to public demands. It was a nice little "club." Nothing else.

For some time critics have opined that one of the best "traders" since the days of Gutch and Hackenschmidt was Martin Plesitna. A big, powerfully built chap, standing well over six feet and weighing around 225 pounds, Plesitna was considered a good bet with any of the top-notchers. But he couldn't obtain a bout. Evidently it was that it wanted none of his game.

I saw Plesitna and his manager in Detroit a few years ago. He was hot on the trail of the "circle" at that time. He was ready to take on any of the elite gang for nothing. The purse was secondary with him. But he got the cold shoulder then. And has ever since for that matter.

When Lewis agreed to meet Munn at Kansas City, the Cornhusker was figured as another "setup." It would be soft picking for the champion. For Munn had been in the game less than a year. He had a slim chance of breaking up the "trust." At least, that was the general opinion.

But Munn completely surprised the wise-ones, including Lewis. Not only did he deprive the latter of his much-cherished crown but he injured him so badly it is questionable if Lewis will ever appear on the mat again.

With the coming of Munn into top honors, wrestling should take a new lease on life. Munn's victory should put the game on a much higher plane. It should place it on a loftier level than it has been in quite a stretch.

SOME SENATORS TAKE ISSUE WITH SECRETARY HUGHES

Insist They're Going to Study Agreement on Reparations.

BULLETIN

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Jan. 20.—The Hughes statement denying that the Paris agreement involved the United States in European commitments is held by President Coolidge to cover the issue which has been raised by the irreconcilable group in the Senate.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Jan. 20.—Secretary Hughes' declaration that the Paris reparations agreement has left the United States as free of European involvements as it ever was has not lessened the desire of Senate irreconcilables to study the document for themselves and lay their course on the basis of their own conclusions.

Chairman Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee has joined Senator Johnson, republican, of California, author of the resolution calling for a copy of the agreement, in comment on the Senator's statement showing that they still purpose to press an inquiry into the whole subject.

Characterizing Mr. Hughes' statement as a very positive one which he hoped would be "illuminating reading abroad," Senator Borah agreed with Senator Johnson that it was in direct conflict with the views expressed by foreign statesmen. The Idaho senator added he could say nothing more until the document was in hand for "careful study."

In view of Secretary Hughes' announced intention of making public the entire agreement when it reaches the state department, the Johnson resolution, now merely calling for a copy of the agreement, may be broadened in its scope when it is taken up by the foreign relations committee.

The resolution probably will be taken up tomorrow with a view to an early favorable report to the Senate.

Ousting of Trotsky is Causing Much Speculation

London, Jan. 20.—(By The Associated Press)—The dismissal of Trotsky as Soviet war minister is regarded here as the outstanding incident in world politics at the moment and the probable effect of his removal is eagerly canvassed.

The war chief's deposition did not come as a surprise and had more than once been prematurely reported, but now that it had admittedly happened, there is universal speculation as to what developments will follow.

There is one fairly general view, namely that the triumvirate of Zinoviev, Stalin and Kameneff is far below Trotsky in ability—as far below as Trotsky was below Lenin. For this reason it is argued that his disappearance, though it is likely to prove a step toward disintegration of the Bolshevik regime, is not put forward with any confidence.

ANOTHER CRISIS IN THE DRAMA.

The drama is facing a crisis—perhaps, as Messrs. Brady and Gillmore assure us, the greatest crisis in its history. It did not take the broadcasting of Lucrezia Bori and John McCormick to tell us that. In addition to free seats and slippers ease, radio affords the advantage which led Jim to argue, in colloquy with Hukleberry Finn, that if Solomon had been really wise he would have preferred a boiler factory to his million wives. When the racket becomes unbearable, you can "shut down." All the glad triumph of walking out on the show can be experienced at no expense and without stirring from an armchair by the fire. Can the dream, or any art, survive in such competition?

It must be remembered, however, that the drama has always been facing the greatest crisis in its history. The more it does so, the more it remains itself. There were the moving pictures. When they threatened to depopulate the gallery, Mr. Brady, who is the Storm King of crises, informed us that the gallery represented the entire profit of the show business, the rest of the house being required to pay expenses. Yet nowadays theatres are built by the dozen with no gallery—and plays are better than ever, and more appreciated. One reason is that they assume an audience of greater intelligence and knowledge of the world. Under the old regime the managers, as Frank Moore Colby expressed it, insisted on always putting in something for the idiot brother in the family circle.

All that is most interesting in the theatre, most precious to dramatic art, defies the microphone. Mr. Gillmore said a true word, apparently unaware that he was robbing himself of his crisis. "Plays emerge very badly over the radio." What he meant was that folk who hear them thus will be discouraged from going to the theatre. But no one who has a proper appreciation of the value of his own time and any sense of dramatic art will abuse both by listening in. The mimetic art of the actor, the stimulating visual sense of the scene, the reinforcement of crowd psychology in the audience, all are lacking. "Hamlet" without the Prince and "Macbeth" in the movies are not more maimed.

HUMAN EXPORTS.

Dr. Harry H. Laughlin, in a report to the immigration committee of the house of representatives, takes note of remarkable fact that while other countries are eagerly trying to export their goods to this country, Italy specializes in exporting men. And apparently Italy makes a fine profit out of it, just as Brazil does in exporting coffee to us, or Germany in exporting fine machinery, or Scotland in exporting contraband liquor. Italy's immigration quota under the present law is 42,000 a year. The Italian government not only encourages the migration of that number to America, but picks them herself from the hundreds of thousands who want to come. The government does that almost as if it were sorting merchandise. It gives the preference to able-bodied young men, unmarried, in the expectation that they will send money home to support their families in Italy for years to come, and will probably return themselves some time with accumulated savings. This is not an unnatural thing to do, inasmuch as men are the leading product of that prolific nation, and the rapidly growing population can not all find a living at home. Yet such a policy places Italy alone among the nations of the world, in not seeking to keep her vigorous sons at home to work directly for the upbuilding of their fatherland. Possibly more far-sighted statesmanship would make that possible, by developing industry more wisely in Italy and the Italian colonies.

WHY WET LAWMAKERS?

"In Washington," says a wet visitor, "it is a cocktail every time you turn around." Another critic pays his respects to the numerous congressmen who are "wet in the cloak rooms and dry on the floor."

Lavish drinking of congressmen on an ocean trip is referred to in the Scott divorce case in Michigan.

The president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment charges "flagrant violation of the Volstead Act" on the part of congressmen.

"When the members of congress," he says, whose records are 100 percent dry and whose political aspirations have always been supported by the Anti-Saloon league, violate the law they are responsible for enacting, how can we count upon the public to respect the law?"

True enough! But not necessarily a reason, as the particular critic seems to think, for abolishing prohibition. It is only a reason for abolishing law-breaking law-makers. Most of the men know them when they are up for election. Women will find them out ere long.

DISEASES.

Dread disease, cancer, gradually increases its death toll. In a year it kills about 90 in every 100,000 Americans.

More cheering is the news that tuberculosis is slowly losing its grip, though it still kills about 93 a year in every 100,000.

Sanitation is exterminating typhoid. Its toll, once mighty, has fallen to about 7 out of 100,000 population a year.

Diabetes snuffs out 18 of every 100,000 yearly. But insulin—which holds this malady in "suspension," halting if not curing it—will rapidly lower its death rate.

As Sally Wiggleson stood staring into the store window where all the fine wax ladies were, something happened.

But first you must know, if you don't know already, that the fine wax ladies had once been Sally's fifteen dolls that the Fairy Queen had changed with a wave of her hand.

This is what happened. The wax ladies began to cry. Tears rolled down all their wax cheeks as Sally stood staring.

The steam-pipes in the window had become very hot and that may have had something to do with it, but I doubt it. Steam-pipes are nothing to home-children.

Sally sighed. "The poor wax ladies are melting," she said. "I'll go into the toy department and see my dear dollies. Oh! I do wish that I had been kind to them. I didn't know I liked them so well. I treated them shamefully and I don't blame them for wanting to come back to the store again."

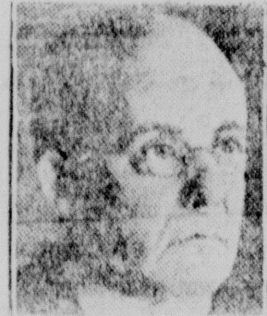

She turned away and all the wax ladies cried out, "Oh, Sally, here we are! Don't you know us?"

But they cried out silently and Sally didn't hear them.

Besides the window was in between.

Now all this time the Fairy Queen had been watching. There she sat on Two Spots, her blue velvet butterfly.

But nobody thought it strange. They said, "The trimming in the window is lovely. What a pretty Fairy! You'd almost think she was real. And if the butterfly wasn't so huge, you would think it was real, too!"

Rowell

By CHESTER H. ROWELL.

The death of Frau Cosima Wagner, widow of the great composer, may have been announced before this is read. In the fullness of time, it was inevitable. Of more permanent interest is the problem of heredity it suggests.

Frau Cosima was the daughter of Franz Liszt and the wife of Richard Wagner, from whom there are no two greater figures in the short roll of supreme musical genius. There is a son, Siegfried Wagner, who is thus the heir of genius on both sides. It is almost as if John Milton had married the daughter of William Shakespeare, and a son had been born to them. And the son—is a competent musician. He has talent; not genius.

This, you may be interested to know, is strictly according to the rules of the game. Scientists have ruled heredity to mathematical formula. By this formula, talent is usually, and genius almost never inherited.

The figures of it are highbrow and the names are Greek—genes, "chromosomes," and the like—but there is a way of translating it into American.

Genius is scarce for the same reason that a royal flush is. It is a unique combination, which is no more likely to turn up a second time in a deck where it has been dealt once than in any other deck. But talent is any combination of mostly high cards.

Stack two decks, one with nearly all high cards and few low ones, and the other with many low and few high ones, and you have a fair picture of good and bad inheritance. Nearly all the hands you can deal out of the one deck will be high-card ones, with an occasional exception, like the black sheep in a good family, while most of the hands out of the other deck will be the exact reverse. But a royal flush will scarcely come twice out of a deck before the cards are worn out—and it may come once out of any deck with the necessary cards in it, no matter what the other cards are.

This, reduced from chromosomes to genes and deuces, is the exact scientific reason why both talent and stupidity are usually, but not always, inherited, while genius almost never is.

LEGISLATORS FEAR WOMEN.

Score one more for women suffrage! The first of this year's legislatures to act on the child labor amendment was that of California, which hatified it as its first act, by nearly 10 to 1, on the fourth day of its session. And some of the legislators frankly avowed that their precipitancy and unanimity were due to fear of the women voters.

If those women did not vote, and were not organized, their lobby might have been treated at best with condescending politeness. As it was, they scarcely needed even to argue the matter. Legislators fell over each other, in the rush for the band wagon.

HOOVER OUTLINES GOVT. POLICY FOR FARMERS' RELIEF of land given to exports by domestic production of what we now import, will substantiate the assertion that it is well within the realm of possibility to balance agricultural industry onto a basic domestic market.

Furthermore, a similar series of calculations would indicate that we can supply any growth of population or consumption by an increase in production from the marginal lands and intensive cultivation, but it will follow in order to do it that there must be constant increase in the marginal profit to the farmer.

If the above view of national policy is correct it seems to me that there are one or two deductions that can be made. The first is the American farmer will never be upon a stable basis so long as he is dependent on the one side on competition with cheap foreign labor and lowered standards of living in the export market, and that he will never be on a stable basis so long as he is competing with imported foodstuffs likewise produced under lower standards of living in the import market. That our drive must be for a balanced agriculture suited to the domestic market increasing in its productivity as the consumptive demand of our country requires. Second, any proposal or plan which will result in further unbalance by stimulation of export commodity for export is necessarily a negation of this whole conception and therefore means, in the long run, a lesser return to American agriculture, and implies certain national dangers in dependence upon foreign food supply.

Economic Policies Necessary

There are two very definite directions in which these policies can be supported and in large measure accomplished. The first is to maintain a tariff on agricultural products on such a basis as will stimulate domestic production, and I may add, this may be done at no consequential charge upon the consumer in proportion to his gains from a national policy of this character. The application of tariff principles should provide for agriculture the same value in stimulating domestic production as has been the case in industry.

The second direction must be the development of increased domestic consumption of agricultural products per capita population. This can only take place through development of a higher general standard of living. In other words, a higher standard of living of the whole population, is a return this can only be brought about by the elimination of waste and increase in efficiency in our whole production and distribution system. There is room for 20 or 30 percent increase in our standards of living today. This embraces the development of cooperative marketing of agricultural products, but cooperative marketing by itself is only one sector of the whole battle against waste and for increase in efficiency.

The farmer is as much interested in what he buys and what he pays in railroad rates and for other services as he is in the prices he receives for what he sells. And therefore, the elimination of waste and increase in efficiency in each sector of our whole production and distribution system is just as important as that remedy which can be applied through cooperative marketing.

The elimination of waste and increase in general economic efficiency directly helps the farmer in three directions. It reduces the cost of things he buys. It increases the return on what he sells. It increases the consumption of agricultural products.

The wage-earner today is receiving an average of 100 percent over pre-war wages; the cost of living is about 72 percent above pre-war; and therefore our workers have more buying power than in pre-war days. Whereas the standard of living of our farmers certainly shows no increase and in many branches of the agricultural industry it has not even been maintained. Our job is to attack the national problem of how to lift the farmer up to this level. It is not to engage in policies that will drag down the standards of living of our workers and city people. Any such policies will tend to bring renewed disaster to our farmers through our reluctance of our domestic market. Any policy that tends to the reduction of the importance of this statement has only to examine the relative consumption of farm products in 1923-24 when we had full employment at high wages, compared to that during the disastrous unemployment in 1921.

I wish at once to make it clear that in speaking of waste, I do not mean waste in the sense of willful waste, but economic waste, which is the natural outgrowth of a competitive system. I do not mean the waste that any single individual can correct by his own initiative, but the waste that can only find remedy in collective action. Our industrial and distribution services are individually of the highest efficiency in the world. It is in their collective action that we can find progress.

The kinds of waste that cause costly losses may be partly catalogued. 1. Waste from speculation, relaxation of effort and extravagance of booms with the infinite waste from unemployment and bankruptcy which comes with the inevitable slump.

2. Waste from excessive seasonal character of production and distribution. 3. Waste caused through lack of information as to national stocks, of production and consumption with its attendant risk and speculation.

4. Waste from lack of standards of quality and grades. 5. Waste from unnecessary multiplication of terms, sizes, varieties. 6. Waste from the lack of uniformity of business practices in terms and documents with the resultant misunderstandings, frauds and disputes.

7. Wastes due to deterioration of commodities. 8. Waste due to inadequate transportation and terminals, to inefficient loading and shipping and unnecessary haulage.

9. Waste due to disorderly marketing, particularly of perishables, with its attendant gluts and famines.

10. Waste due to too many links in the distribution chain and too many chains in the system.

11. Waste due to bad credits. 12. Waste due to destructive competition of people who are in fact exchanging their capital through little understanding of the fundamentals of business in which they are engaged.

13. Waste due to enormous expenditure of effort and money in advertising and sales promotion effort, without adequate basic information on which to base sales production.

14. Waste due to unfair practices of a small minority. 15. A multitude of wastes in use of materials, in unnecessary fire destruction, in traffic accidents and many other directions.

These wastes are not the small change of industry and commerce. There is scarcely a step in this accomplishment of squeezing out waste which does not interpret itself in millions of dollars of annual saving.

The work of the Department during the last four years has demonstrated that there is a vast importance to these wastes. I am disposed to agree with a recent report of the Engineering Council that they amount in many many lines to 25 or 30 percent of the cost paid by the consumer or producer. They can not all be corrected and where progress can be made it is only through toilsome building step by step in a thousand places, and always and only through the cooperation of well disposed trade and industry, and through a wider understanding of the problems involved, and of the coordination of effort necessary to secure results.

The Department of Commerce has, during the last four years engaged in continuous and exhaustive study of our whole production and distribution system. We have demonstrated in several scores of different directions the practicability and success of a going program. We have, during this time, held over 200 conferences with those representing various trades and industries in advancing these ideas—practically all of them at their request. There is today in actual motion effective organization co-operating with the Department in systematic and gradual elimination of such waste. Something over 100 industries and trades are developing actual programs in various stages of attainment. They vary from eliminating too many sizes in a single commodity to such organizations as to that which we have set up for regional action of shippers and the railways.

The elimination of wastes which resulted in the reduction of the price of operating the railways by many percent in the cost of building materials and scores of directions has enabled the consumer to receive its goods at an average of 55 percent above pre-war today although wages are 100 percent. These results are the fruit of a spirit of cooperation in industry itself.

The remedies lie in a multitude of directions. The first thing is to determine accurately the fact, and the second the remedy, third the nature of cooperative action necessary to overcome it, and fourth the service the government may give in helpful assistance to such action.

The fact is that the greatest waste of all our economic system is the periodic inflationary boom and its consequent ensuing slump with all their speculation, unemployment and extravagance, for without boom there is no slump. The correction of this waste lies in the prevention of booms. No sensible business man wants either boom or slump. He wants stability. Our working folk should dread a boom above all things because it means an afterglow of unemployment and misery. Our farmers would resent a boom more than anything else that can happen in our economic system because it means that they will inevitably get the worst of the deflation which follows. Stability or inflexibility in production and distribution is largely the result of the collective judgment of the trades. They cannot form a right judgment unless they know the facts as to their own business and as to the trade as a whole. Furthermore they must also know the probable trend of business in general as indicated by the movement in other trades.

The best protection against booms is that every business man shall have the information so that he may realize from the shifts in credit, from the movements in stocks, of production and consumption, that the economic balance wheel is moving too fast and if every man then safeguards against danger disaster never comes. So the first and foremost thing is to have such facts broadcasted so as to give every man that sound basis upon which his own judgment can react. Sound statistics are the greatest preventive of speculation and profiteering ever invented. There are other remedies of important character and I commend to everyone the report on the Business Cycle issued by the Department under the guidance of leading business men and economists. They placed adequate statistical information first, better control of credit second, and long range planning in the construction industries third. In that service advances are being made today on all these lines, particularly the first, by the Department of Commerce.

Other great fields lie in the establishment of standards, the elimination of unnecessary varieties and dimensions of articles in trade, the simplification of business documents, specifications, bills of lading, invoices, warehouse contracts and a thousand things that reduce lost motion, excessive stocks, waste stocks, etc., etc. They expand into fields of reducing seasonal operation, of better transportation, terminal facilities and a host of other things.

The reduction of waste means that a considerable part of our population who are busily employed in this unnecessary motion can be directed towards the production of other commodities and thus their addition to the national standard of living; it means a lowering in cost of living; or it means more goods for the same money. To our workers it means less labor, more time for recreation, and no attack upon wage levels; to our farmers it means an increased proportion of the consumer's dollar as the returns which he receives from his produce are subject to the deductions of the cost of marketing. If we decrease these costs by the elimination of the waste in them we increase the return to him. To him it also means enlarged domestic consumption. Moreover, he participates also in the benefits as a consumer. To our industrial and commercial men there is an increase in stability in business and a sounder foundation under our entire business fabric. The elimination of waste is a total asset. It has no liabilities.

In a wider sense of eliminating waste and increasing national efficiency, there are other equally important items to the farmer and our people in general. For instance:

The consolidation of our railways into large systems will allow a more sure readjustment of rates in favor of the farmer because wider diversification in traffic, greater economy in operation, greater financial stability and better handling of terminal problems by the railways.

The development of central generation and interconnection of electric power companies will decrease costs and give greater assurance of supply of power which will effect all industry and production costs.

The construction of the St. Lawrence and other waterways, the improvement of the Columbia and Colorado Rivers, will contribute in various directions to decrease costs of transportation and increase the volume of water power and the security of irrigation communities.

A systematic large scale and vigorous handling of the development of synthetic nitrates at Muscle Shoals will contribute to the cheapening of fertilizers.

A score of other constructive efforts could be enumerated.

Character of Organization.

I do not believe it is possible to carry out a great national program for the elimination of waste on any other basis than voluntary cooperation. I do not believe it can be done by regulation and law. The government can do an enormous service by the creation of such agencies as will stimulate cooperation not only in the field of marketing farm products but in all the fields. It can do a great deal through its service of expert advice, of information, removal of legal barriers and above all by organized leadership. The Department, in response to the wish of the commercial community has given leadership to organization, furnished information and given expert advice. The results already accomplished are large and daily growing, and they constitute a contribution to the farmers' welfare of the first order.

Nor am I talking about abrogating the Sherman Act in relation to manufacture and the trades.

I have no patience with those who deliberately try to confuse these efforts at cooperation in waste elimination and increased efficiency with price fixing and restraint of trade. Any intelligent person who has the patience to read and think these problems through and the methods we have developed for their correction will find these efforts to be in the interest of public welfare, and free from restraint. They are in fact the foundation of real competition.

In the line of this work in a department concerned with all branches of distribution, it has not been possible for us to sit silently by and witness the lack of organization for a correction of the vast amount of waste in marketing of agricultural products. It touches many other groups than farmers. Especially does Congress impose upon this Department the specific duty of fostering and developing all domestic and foreign commerce, and the commerce in agriculture products is 60 percent of the whole. The government has the power to agriculture in these directions has been wholly inadequate. Business is more forward in its ability at practical organization than the farmer; he needs more help.

Ideally developed farm cooperative, however, would solve only part of the problem in marketing farm products. A vast amount of help must be secured from manufacturers of agricultural produce and the distribution trades to better organization.

An Instance in Agriculture.

In response to an appeal of perishable producers in the west, middle west and south, we undertook, as we have undertaken at the demand of other industries, to make a systematic investigation as to the wastes in the marketing of their products or services. It serves as a pointed example in agriculture.

Incidental to this inquiry many other factors in the situation of the producers of perishables became more visible than ever evident—not only transportation and terminal difficulties, but other economic influences which adversely affect these specialized industries. A review of the waste arising from various causes may be formulated as follows:

1. The waste of an unnecessary number of purchases and sale transactions—that is, an unnecessary number of links in the distribution chain and an unnecessary number of different chains from the same center of production to the same center of consumption.

2. The waste in transportation of inferior and unsalable products.

3. The waste in decay arising from delayed movements and repeated handling.

4. The waste from lack of constructive action between states and federal government in quarantine actions.

5. The waste from inadequate facilities.

THOMAS A. EDISON SAYS:

"I Think It Is Possible to Devise Apparatus to Receive Communications from the Dead."

By NEA Service.

(Copyright 1925, by NEA Service Inc.)

Orange, N. J.—The secretary who arranged the interview with Thomas A. Edison volunteered the admonition "You mustn't ask Mr. Edison about communication with the dead. Mr. Edison has been so misrepresented in regard to that delicate matter that if you mention it to him he will go right up in the air."

Despite this dire warning, the forbidden question was the first one ventured:

"Do you think it possible, Mr. Edison, that you may devise any mechanism through which, when you have left this life, you may hope to communicate with us?"

The wonder-wizard of communication did not go up in the air. He answered graciously and fully. But he was cautious against misquotation. He took a pencil and a pad and wrote carefully this fundamental part of his statement:

"If my theory is correct—that the machine called man is only a mass of dead matter and that the real life is in the millions of individual units which navigate this machine and if on the destruction of the machine they keep together, including those individuals which have charge of memory (which is our personality)—then I think it is possible to devise apparatus to receive communications if they desire to make them. It will be very difficult, as each individual as to size is beyond the limits of our present microscopes."

Having thus marked securely his metes and bounds, Mr. Edison relaxed into frank talk. He stoutly insisted that he be understood as not meaning any such moot thing as "spiritistic messages, so-called."

He means messages as substantial and as susceptible of authentication as those of the telegraph, telephone, phonograph and radio. There shall be no "medium," no mystery, no superstition, no "autohypnotism known as faith." His method, to serve at all, must absolutely guarantee the integrity of the communication it conveys and guard positively against any possible doubt, dispute or misconstruction.

It goes without saying that communication with the dead, thoroughly authenticated, as Edison says he must have it, would instantly revolutionize all generally accepted theories regarding human existence, reveal a new science of the essence of life and open up vast new visions as to the nature and ultimate function of matter.

McGRAW EXPECTS GIANTS WILL BE ABLE TO REPEAT

Realizes, However, He and His Men Face Hard Campaign.

New York, Jan. 20.—(By The Associated Press)—The New York Giants are building formidably for the 1926 campaign, a pennant struggle that promises to put the morale of the National League champions to one of the severest tests of their career.

John McGraw knows his team faces a strenuous fight and realizes the handicap it will encounter as an outgrowth of the 1924 bribery scandal.

But McGraw's confidence is none the less keen as he maps out his 1925 plan of attack.

McGraw has made no radical changes and contemplates none in the army that won the 1924 flag, but is concentrating a good share of his efforts on bolstering the battery departments. The Giants have collected 19 pitchers for spring training in addition to new back stopping talent.

Has Six Veterans

McGraw has a half dozen pitching veterans upon whom he counts heavily for 1925—Art Nehf, Hugh McQuillan, Bill Ryan, Claude Jonnard, Jack Bentley and Virgil Barnes. Among a dozen or more others he hopes to obtain talent from such prospects as Lavin, Wisner, Dean and Bradshaw, obtained from various teams.

Two stars from college ranks, Hugh Hagney of Notre Dame and Jim Tunney of Holy Cross are also on the list besides Jack Scott, 1922 world's series hero.

Outside of the batteries the only major shift in the team as it left the field in the last world's series game will be the return of Groh to third base in place of Lindstrom. McGraw believed Lindstrom needs further experience before being able to replace Groh.

McGraw has not yet decided whether to employ again the reversible infield and outfield arrangement he used in the closing part of the 1924 season. Under that system, he used George Kelly first sacker in center field, Bill Terry at first and Hack Wilson in left, in place of Meusel, when facing right handed pitching. Against southpaws Kelly came to first, Wilson to center and Meusel patrolled left.

Jackson and Frisch in the infield and Young in right field were fixtures.

TENDLER GIVEN FIRST K. O. BY PHILA. SCRAPPER

Jack Zivic Battered Lou All Over the Ring Last Eve.

New York, Jan. 20.—(By The Associated Press)—Benny Leonard has retired from the lightweight boxing championship unbeaten. His greatest antagonist of recent years, Lew Tandler of Philadelphia, is returning from a knockout for the first time in his life.

Battered down twice at the hands of the veteran Jack Zivic, Tandler must have undergone a terrible experience in the realization that time had conquered a man who a little more than a year ago fought the great Leonard twice and stood firmly on his feet at the end of 15 rounds.

Leonard and Tandler clashed in Jersey City on July 27, 1922 and the champion's margin of victory was slight. On July 23, 1923, they met again at the Yankee Stadium in New York and again the champion successfully defended his title.

For the past year and a half Tandler has been doing little fighting. His defeat at the hands of Zivic undoubtedly precludes any possibility of his entering the tournament for the crown for which in years passed, he strived so valiantly.

Nurmi Gets Over His Peeve: Will Stay Here

New York, Jan. 20.—(By The Associated Press)—Paavo Nurmi, admittedly perturbed at conditions he encountered in his record cross country dash to Chicago and return last week, during which he is reported to have tried and failed to desert, American tracks and return to Finland, has decided to remain here for nearly a score of meets and may be persuaded to participate in some of the early season outdoor events.

One day's rest appears to have given Paavo's nimble feet a new lease of speed, and once more he pads around the tracks in training for one of the severest schedules an athlete ever has attempted. Tomorrow night he invades Newark at the St. Joseph's Catholic Club games when once more he will face his Finnish-American rivals, Nilsson, Prim and Fager probably in a handicap event.

Coughs Always Dangerous—Quick Way to Stop Them

Chronic coughs and chest colds often lead to more serious trouble. Not only is the infection itself dangerous, but the continual coughing spells day and night so weaken your entire system that you can no longer fight off disease.

So stop a cough the quickest way you can. Do this there is nothing better than that old-time tried and true remedy, Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey. Doctors say there is nothing like pine-tar extract to quickly loosen and remove the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the cough, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation. The quick relief to the stubborn cough often seems almost magical.

But be sure you get the genuine Dr. Bell's Pine-Tar-Honey, and no substitute. Dr. Bell's is the original pine-tar honey and has been known for over a quarter of a century as the best. It is a combination of just the right proportions of pine-tar, honey and other quick-acting, healing ingredients which the phlegm and congestion which are the direct cause of the cough, while the honey both gives a pleasant taste and helps soothe irritation. Battling Nelson Regains Control of His Fortune

Chicago, Jan. 20.—"Battling" Nelson, former light-weight champion, who has been denied the fortune he accumulated in his days in the ring through circumstances resulting from his father's will has succeeded in regaining control of his property, according to his former manager, Jack Robinson.

Nelson turned his ring earnings over to his father, who left a will providing that none of the estate, consisting of real estate at Hegewisch, Ill., could be disposed of.

Illinois Yacht and Canoe Holds Annual Business Meet

Peoria, Ill., Jan. 20.—The Illinois Valley Yacht & Canoe Club, at its annual meeting held here last night elected A. T. Griffith to succeed Walter B. Wilde as commodore. For the ensuing year the choice also fell on Oscar Krueger and Phil P. Morton, as vice commodore and rear commodore respectively. Following the election a banquet was tendered at the University Club.

Jack Zivic Will Seek Leonard's Old Crown

Pittsburgh, Pa., Jan. 20.—Jack Zivic of Pittsburgh, conqueror of Lew Tandler of Philadelphia in a furious bout here last night, will go after the lightweight championship recently vacated by Benny Leonard, if he can make the weight, James Bronson, Zivic's manager announced today.

YOU CAN QUICKLY LIMBER UP SORE, STIFF, SWOLLEN JOINTS

Even chronic rheumatic swellings in knee, foot, ankles, arch, hips, elbow, shoulder or finger joints yield to the mighty powerful influence of JOINT-EASE.

It's here, right in town and every live druggist has it.

It's a low price remedy, to be sure, but that doesn't stop it from taking the kinks, lameness or torture out of your troubled joints.

Joint-Ease is the name, so called because it is compounded solely for the purpose of relieving all joint ailments. Just rub it on the tormented, lame joints and in just a few seconds it will penetrate through skin and flesh straight down to the ligaments and tendons of the joints—right where the agony starts—Then blessed comfort comes quickly. It absorbs instantly and is so clean that you can rub it on often and get thereby results much more quickly, when the joint is inflamed and the agony intense.

Being such a powerful counter-irritant, it cannot help bring speedy and helpful results in congestion, sore throat, chest colds, lumbago and neuralgia much quicker than almost any remedy you can buy.

But you must remember that it is for joint afflictions the Joint-Ease is mostly dispensed, and its helpfulness will astonish you after all ordinary liniments and other treatments have failed. Public Drug & Book Co., sells lots of it.—Adv.

THE NORTH DIXON DAIRY

(By V. S. Mullen.)

Cut off the milk supply of a city for even a few days and there must inevitably come hunger, illness, and the attendant suffering and the sacrifice of child life.

The department of health of New York City has made an exhaustive investigation among one million school children and this is what it found: That 611,000 of these children, or more than 60 percent, were "on the border line of malnutrition," that 216,000 more, or more than 20 percent, were badly undernourished and in need of a physicians care; that only a few more than 17 percent or 173,000, out of one million were without signs of wrong diet. And that the children of the well-to-do were affected with the rest.

New York City is like other towns and cities. It is not peculiar. So these facts and figures, as statisticians will agree, indicate conditions elsewhere in this country. They mean that four out of five children—anywhere—are probably wrongly fed, one in every five the danger point of permanently injuring his health; they mean that your child may have but one chance in five to develop as he should.

Examinations at war time showed that 32 percent of our men examined for war duty also were found to have been affected by malnutrition at some period of life, and they, too, came from averages homes from all parts of the country.

Pure, rich, wholesome milk contributes more to health and vitality than all other foods put together. It is Nature's great builder. A quart a day for every child is not too much, and each should have at least a pint. Grown-ups, too, will find it wholesome and desirable, while in old age, with the need of simple fare, milk is commonly and largely depended upon.

The North Dixon Dairy assists in maintaining a high standard of health in this city by delivering to the stores and homes of Dixon hundreds of quarts of pure, fresh milk and cream each day. This dairy, located at 1020 North Galena avenue, is one of the newer of the retail firms of the city, started here as it was some four months ago by Edmund and William Ryan, two of the younger business men of Dixon. Previous to launching into business for themselves, both spent several years as employees of other dairy firms, and thus gained an extensive education in the proper methods of handling a business enterprise of this kind.

The entire amount of milk distributed through the North Dixon Dairy is gathered twice daily from four of the finest herds in Lee county, special care having been taken in their selection with the idea of not getting alone milk of the richest butterfat content, but in getting milk from herds that were tested for tuberculosis symptoms regularly and where proper sanitary methods in milking and handling were used.

Prompt delivery along regular routes extending to all parts of the city is maintained through the use of a modern motor driven truck, and, in order that their customers may be accommodated to the fullest extent, extra deliveries of milk or cream will be made in response to telephone orders.

Every care and precaution is taken in handling and bottling the milk so that every customer is assured that milk secured from this firm is pure and wholesome, and may be freely used by every member of the family.

TWENTY-FOURTH INSTALLMENT

He began to wonder what knavery, what rank injustice had driven her out into the road, unprotected and pleading to be taken away. His gorge rose at the thought of it. Somebody—some man undoubtedly—had given plain to this angelic creature. How he wished for a little more social courage, just to get the truth from her and to offer his knightly services.

But upon the last high resolution the car bumped; she turned her head a little, and as the street lamps grew brighter, opened her eyes and looked up at him.

He had seen her before.

"Comfortable all right?" he asked thickly.

"Oh, it's lovely," she murmured, then blinked under the street lights and sat up. "I've had a splendid nap."

"I ain't much of a pillow, I reckon," he blurted out.

"Who told you that?" she asked.

Through his rough coat she had raised bare arms to arrange her hair, and she showed her dimples in a smile.

"Well, nobody."

"You've been so sweet," she told him. "I don't know what on earth I should have done. And I was so cold and tired. I've had a horrid evening."

Her mouth dropped so deliciously that he had the courage to growl.

"Look here, I don't suppose it's any of my business, but if there's anything I can do—"

"Oh, you're so good!" she thanked him.

"No, I ain't good," he blundered on.

"But I'm pretty strong. And I'll lick any livin' man that even so much as dares—"

Because he was almost sure who she was, he was checked by his own audacity. Who was he to fight for her?

"You would. I know you would," she said softly, and laid her hand on his arm.

Just then they swung into Grand Avenue whose on-and-off electric signs, gong-banging trolleys and uniformed traffic policemen awoke the dreamer from his wanderings under the moon.

The lady by his side was sitting straight and prim now, and her attitude so quelled him that he scarcely dared look around, even though the traffic had permitted it. As they rolled east, the Red Front Store he was tempted to point it out to her and boast a little, but a glimpse through the lighted window revealed Jo in his shirt-sleeves playing with one of his children—the dirtiest one. So he bent silently to his wheel, pointing the car down toward the residence section where he felt sure she belonged.

"Where shall I take you, Ma'am?" he asked, looking at her in the full light, and feeling sure now of the resemblance that he had suspected.

"Oh, on Inness Street," she said crisply, formally. "But please don't bother. I can call a taxi at the Hamilton. And you've been so kind—"

"Inness Street ain't a block out of my way," he lied, and pressed grimly on. The rest of their drive was through lighted, busy streets, past motion picture theatres, past illuminated billboards, past gleaming automobile showrooms.

"We're gettin' to be right smart of a town," he ventured as they were turning the Inness Street corner.

"Isn't it dreadful?" she cried.

Two blocks further on she pressed his arm and pointed to the curb.

"I live here," she explained.

He slowed his car by the fine old horse-block and helped her out. Behind her the Corinthian pillars and famous bayed veranda of the Peake House loomed to the stars.

"You needn't take me to the door," she told him sweetly, putting her hand in his. It rested there a full minute, so she was the little one . . . and the hand he was now holding had once closed on his peppermint.

Her nigger had scolded him for giving candy to Judge Peake's sacred grandchildren.

"Good night," he said finally, and to make it more complete, "Pleased to meet you, I'm sure."

"You've been so good!" She admitted him with her soft eyes. "And don't forget your overcoat. I left it on the seat. I can't tell you how I appreciate—"

"I'd do anything for you," he said, for she had made him quite insane.

"Let you you," she called gayly back over her shoulder, "and you could, too. Well, good-night—Candy Holtz."

He stood bare-headed on the sandstone block, a figure of chivalry. He would do anything for her, and she had believed him. . . .

Finally, because she had gone in and shut the formidable door, he climbed into his Ford and drove slowly out to the Maxwell Addition. Not until he had turned on the light in the sheet-iron garage and backed his car in did he discover a source of an angelic visitation. Brightly black on a shabby leather cushion lay a flat, silky square that might have been a purse. Reversely he picked it up and saw her initials, F. L. P., in tiny diamonds. Its clasp was a little shield with a crown over it and a wavy ribbon engraved with foreign words.

Awkwardly he opened it. A downy puff fell to the grassy floor. . . . The little case was full of queer gold containers for powder and lip sticks and pencils, and there was a mirror so inset that you stared at your own face the instant the flap was raised. It carried a ghost of her perfume, faintly as thought the little glass, in reflecting her beauty so often and captured some of her character. The thing was valuable, he surmised, and of course he'd have to return it right away.

The little powder puff lay like a stranded fairy on the floor. He picked it up and held it for a moment, daintily between clumsy fingers. Then he shook it until a cloud of pinkish fragrant moths danced under the electric light. What a toy! Before restoring it to the case he touched it appraisingly to his nose and then, swiftly, foolishly, to his lips.

CHAPTER 40

Jimmy Wilder offered his car to drive Margaret and San Pilar back to town. When they stopped at the horse block in front of the Inness Street house the Spaniard jumped out and started impatiently on the walk. Wilder followed with Margaret and at the steps lingered to volunteer, "I'll hang around, if you think I'm needed."

"It's all right, Jimmy, dear," said Margaret, giving him her hand. "You're just as sweet as you can be. But I'm sure she's home—and if she isn't we can get Daddy's car in a minute. Now you go to bed and sleep, old Jim, and I'll see you in the morning."

"Good night, Peg."

"Good night, Jim."

That was all their parting on this, the first night of their betrothal.

Because colored servants, even in the best regulated of houses, are seldom home evenings, save on gala occasions, Margaret opened the door with a latch key and showed the Marquis into the big, dark-browed drawing room.

"She'll be in her room," said the older sister, "and if she isn't sound asleep I'll make her come down and apologize."

"May I smoke?" he asked, bringing out his case and bowing as though to beg indulgence of Victorian ghosts, lurking under the pompous cornices.

"Of course. And if you're not comfortable here, go into Granddad's library and find yourself a book."

"Beauty and sense combined—how rare in a woman!" he said with unusual earnestness as he touched her fingers to his lips. "What a wife you'll make for somebody!"

She laughed a little faintly and went rapidly up the stairs. At the Oval Chamber's door she knelt softly, the two-three rip-knock which the girls had practiced since childhood. She was rewarded by a drawing, "Come in, Peg."

Between panels of yellow brocade under candelabra that dripped crystals like a lady's earrings, Flora Lee sat at her Venetian toilet table, trying her hair in the "new way," which had just been seen in town. She was humming softly, tunelessly to herself. . . . Thus sat the Lorelei, combing her long golden hair, baling sharp rocks with her destructive fascinations.

"You home?" she crooned, not raking the trouble to turn, but smiling at Margaret in the mirror.

"I see you are," Margaret replied, nettled by her sister's casual behavior.

Flora Lee removed several hairpins from her mouth. "Everybody's so cross about my staying up late. I should think you'd all be gloriously happy when I go to bed on time."

"You went away like a spoiled child. Everybody noticed it, of course, and Carlos was in a dreadful state."

"Really?" The girl turned suddenly, dimpling like a rose.

"The car wasn't there. We thought the order obligates itself to rear his children in his religious faith if he should be called by death and the children are admitted to Mooseheart. Both Protestant and Roman Catholic."

at first you'd been crazy enough to walk. How in the world did you get home?"

"Oh, that wasn't hard," drawled Flora Lee. "I found a candy man coming down the road in a Ford."

"A candy what?"

"Man. He runs a taffy store on Grand Avenue. He told me all about himself, how he was going to be the John D. Rockefeller of the peppermint business. Sort of Caudill Oil, you know. I couldn't listen to all he said—my drinks sort of died on me and I went to sleep. But he didn't mind. He talked right on. He's crazy about me."

"Flora Lee," said Margaret almost sternly, "if you can keep your mind on anything for twenty minutes, I wish you'd try and show a little consideration for Carlos. He's dead in earnest, if you're not."

"Oh, I'm in earnest all right," laughed Flora Lee, a little harshly. "Do you think I'd let him go—with all those titles and castles in Spain and everywhere else? I'm crazy because it's convenient but I have my lucid intervals."

"Well, you'll have to turn over a new leaf. Carlos isn't going to stand much more."

"How do you know how much men will stand?"

In that question there was an implication that brought a sting to Margaret's cheeks. A tart reply was on her lips when Flora Lee broke in.

"Don't get peeved with me Peg. I wish I could be as good and sweet as you are. And you've got twice my looks. Only you don't know how to put science into your game."

"He's downstairs waiting for you to apologize," said Margaret coldly.

"Carlos?" She tossed with her hair a half minute. "I thought he would be."

"Well, you'd better dress and go down."

"Oh, give him time to feel sorry for himself. He's got to get over one or two things. He told me tonight, you know, that I have a vulgar taste in men. Wasn't that sweet?"

She sat contemplatively, touching the edge of a brush to the hair over her temples. Suddenly she turned on her gilded stool, her face glowing.

"He's got such funny ideas, Peg. Do you know what I'd like to do? Invite somebody's chauffeur to lunch and pass him off as one of my nearest and dearest. It would give Bunny something to talk about for ages and ages. I think I shall ask that candy king if I can find his address. He stole my vanity case, you know—"

"The lovely one Major de Pinzon brought you?"

"Yes," said Flora Lee absent-mindedly. Her thoughts apparently were far from her loss. She sprang to her feet, threw aside her negligee and picked her pink dress from a chair, all in one long swooping movement.

"Oh, well," she drawled, "I s'pose Bunny's cooled down by now and can be reasoned with." Leisurely she stepped into her rosy working clothes.

Margaret went out the door and closed it softly behind her. In the hall she had an impulse to continue her part as San Pilar's confederate, but half way down the stairs she was halted by a glimpse of him in Judge Peake's library, bending studiously over a book which he had taken from the shelves—shelves that were growing emptier and emptier as their owner's age increased. Time and again the old man had caused his volumes to be reassembled, their ranks closed like remnants of a one-pronged army that gathers for a last stand.

Margaret sighed. Sometimes the shadowy things she faced without seeing seemed to close her in. Two fates oppressed her; her own and that of her family. The picture of the cultivated, rather fine foreigner, lost in reading just as her Grandfather had been lost so long, served as an illustration of the difficulties which beset the degenerating Peakes. The surface of their world had turned over, once at least, since Judge Peake got his M.A. and his M.L. Under the stones he sat and read, and read, and read. And when the new breed of earth's inhabitants dug down to disturb the old man's dream he sold his books to pay them for giving him a little air under his big, pompous stones. . . . Down in the library San Pilar represented a civilization that had never turned over. Perhaps petrified into narrow grooves that were just as bad. Maybe Flora Lee was right in lampooning his horror of vulgarities. After all, she did understand men. . . .

Well-Known Woman to

Direct Homemakers Hour

Announcement of the appointment of Mrs. Grace Violi Gray, widely known lecturer, clubwoman and home economics expert, as director of Homemakers hour of broadcasting station WLS, is contained in a message received here from Chicago. In her new work Mrs. Gray will be heard every afternoon between 3:45 and 4:45, while she presides over the programs broadcasted from this station.

Mrs. Gray is well known here and throughout the middle west. She has spoken on Home Economics subjects in this and other states and has written for national magazines. She is a platform lecturer of the Illinois Farmers Institute, an extension lecturer of the School of Domestic Arts and Sciences, and Home Economics chairman of the First District of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs. A graduate of the University of Chicago, Mrs. Gray was formerly head of the Economics staff of the Illinois Woman's College, assistant Home Economics head of Rockford College and assistant professor of the Department of Home Economics at the Iowa State College.

A farm woman herself, Mrs. Gray knows the psychology of the woman on the farm and in the home. She further sees the possibilities of radio to both rural housewives and city homemakers and the largest part of her energies from WLS will be devoted to make things easier and more pleasant for the wife and mother.

21 YEARS IN PRISON

AGGIE MYERS

By NEA Service

St. Louis—"It was winter for me there in prison, but I knew, through all those terrible years, another springtime would come."

Aggie Myers, longest term woman convict in America, thus sums up her thoughts and experiences, after 21 years in the Missouri State Penitentiary for the murder of her husband.

Twenty-one years of confinement—shut off from the world—with only memories of a happy girlhood and memories of her fatal mistake to keep her company.

Now Aggie at 42 has passed again into the open places of freedom, pardoned as farewell act of retiring Governor Arthur M. Hyde.

But it is a different world than the one which Aggie left 21 years ago. Her old friends are gone, the places she used to visit are there no more.

Once in Death House

And she finds herself reaching out aimlessly to gather anew the tangled threads of her existence.

Aggie went to prison for killing her husband while the "other man" held him in bed.

For a year she sat in the death house, having been sentenced to die on the gallows. Then her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

"My soul was filled with horror during my first few years in prison," Aggie says. "Later I became resigned, realizing I would have to face the long road with a happier mind."

"With the knowledge finally gained that some degree of happiness could be attained by kindness and service to other unfortunates, I began building for myself a bridge of memories. And that bridge often led me to the grave of my dreams."

Lived With Memories

"Memories—I believe it was my memories that kept me from going mad. It was the memory of other days and loved ones I had known that enabled me to see beyond the prison walls, to give me solace in hours of trial."

"I thought of everything—my past, my friends, and I dreamed of a possible future if once I ever could convince anyone I was not bad, but only wanted to live my life in quiet atonement for my act."

"Motherhood—sometimes it was that, because I, too, had the yearning of natural womanhood—but this instinct in time was relegated also to my dream graves."

"Life for me up there was a constant repression of everything. I was shut away from all life, and except for the occasional rumble of street cars and motor trucks, I only could dream of the distant cities in which I had lived and picture to myself the charm of the hum and throb of industry."

"The faces I saw were dull and paled by prison routine. It was only in my mind that I could picture the flushed and happy faces of women and girls who were living their natural life."

A Little Dog Came

"With all our troubles, I don't think prison life was so hard for me as the other women inmates as it seemed for the men we saw occasionally."

"So many of them were young—just boys, sometimes—and they came for long stretches of years. Sometimes it seemed their hearts were broken and, after a few months, their spirits and lives were broken, too."

One day a little fox terrier found its way to Aggie's cell. She gathered the dog to her bosom and begged guards to permit her to keep it.

Upon advice of the prison physician the dog was permitted to remain in the cell. Aggie named her new friend "Wiggles."

One day a group of wives of state officials visited the prison. There they met Aggie and "Wiggles." A matron told of Aggie's love for the dog and of the untiring faithfulness of the animal toward his mistress.

Her Spring Has Come

"No woman can be wholly bad and love a dog so well," said Mrs. Hyde, wife of the governor.

And she and the other women joined their pleas to those of others for Aggie's freedom.

Three days before his term of office expired Hyde signed a parole.

And Aggie came back here to live with a sister, carrying a plant which had brightened her prison cell.

"Down there my little cell room became my home," Aggie explains, "and I loved to keep it clean. Once in a while there were flowers and I had this potted plant which I kept green and fragrant."

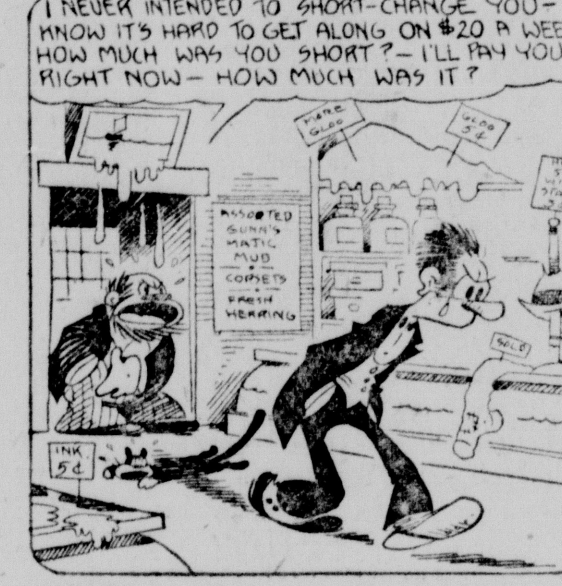

"I am looking forward to the time the plant will bloom again, for it will mean the springtime of my dreams have come again—to bring warmth after 21 years of winter."

HOUSEHUNTING

THERE is always ample reason, when you enter moving season, for a run of nervous worryment and fret. Aching feet in shoes a squeaking, take you 'round while you are seeking for a home, but good news knows what you will get.

Miles and miles you go a walking, to a landlord army talking, and you visit homes of every brand and sort. Many things turn up to stop you, rentals high will often flop you, and you find that seeking homes is far from sport.

After while you find a dandy, to the cars and stores quite handy, so your spirits rise to highest pitch, and then all elation's quickly dented when you find the place is rented. And you start out hunting homes all o'er again.

Though the real estate serve us, hunting homes just makes you nervous, also weary, when you travel near and far. Though you know it is behooving that you once again be moving, in the end you're glad to stay right where you are.

This sort of fellow always overdoes a style, misjudging the consequential strut of the cock-sparrow for the assured poise of the one "to the manner born." The scourge of fashion is exaggeration in the belief that this constitutes originality.

In men's dress, there is room aplenty for individuality, but there is none for originality. The most "original" people in the world make faces through plaid windows at the unoriginal rest of us. The "original dresser," with his silly angling for attention, is responsible for all the odium that attaches, undeservedly, to keeping up a smart appearance. Avoid "originality." Every man likes to be looked at, but no vertebrate man wants to be stared at as though he were the bearded lady in the circus or the two-headed calf.

Periodically, much is heard about the decline of the vogue of the brogue in men's shoes. Yet, somehow or other, it declines to decline. The brogue is still seen on every hand—or, rather, foot—and it is doubtful if this rugged, masculine style will ever lose favor among young men and sportsmen, be they young or old.

Such a shoe, made of Scotch or Norwegian grained or pebbled leathers, with the peaked wing tip and the full perforations around the quarter and down the eyelet stays, as well as the heavy extension sole and the low, broad heel, is a smart and sturdy type of shoe that is widely worn and liked. Moreover, it enables one to assume wool or silk-and-wool hosiery in those bold patterns and colors which have no doubles in either silk or lisle.

You may choose any of three shades of tan, the lighter ones predominating in some sections. However, the black shoe is gaining in vogue, especially in metropolitan centers. The squarish or spade-shaped French toe has not only been adopted for day Oxford, but also for dance shoes to accompany Tuxedo clothes. These, of course, have very light, flexible, beveled soles to lend ease and softness.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Finding the lifeless bodies of his two partners at their gold-mining camp, Harry Gloster flees southward, knowing that he will be accused of the murder of a famous rider of the old plains, helps Gloster to escape. Later Joan, in quest of Gloster, falls in with a famous gangster, who is a scheme to rob the Wisconsin Bank. Samuel Carney, cashier, has given MacArthur the combination to the safe, but later repents and tells the president of the bank what he has done. Gloster goes with Buck Daniels, Joan's guardian, in search of the girl. Gloster finds her, but for some strange reason she refuses to leave the gang.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

He said soberly, after a moment: "Goodbye Joan, for a little while."

"For both our sakes, Harry, it's goodbye forever."

Instead of answering he stepped closer to her and, taking her face between both his big hands, he tilted back her head and kissed her lips. They were as cold as her cheeks, and her eyes, he thought, looked up to him as if he were as far removed as the stars above them.

CHAPTER XXIX

The Fourth White Pebble

He went back to the entrance to the hollow and, looking around, he saw Joan still watching him. So he went on to Buck Daniels sleeping at the mouth of the gap. He took out a cigarette case and when he was sitting up in his blanket, told him briefly and clearly everything that had happened. When he had finished he waited for a reply.

But, first of all, Buck found his pipe, filled it very slowly, and lighted it. He puffed away at it for a time.

"I knew when I hit the trail," he said at length, "that it ain't no good. It was the same way with the trails that I took after Dan Barry. Once I tried to bring him back to Kate. And the way I worked it was by insulting Dan. I hit him across the face in front of a lot of other gentes."

"Then I turned and ran for it. He came fast, but I had a relay of horses fixed up, and they got me back to the ranch in the nick of time. And handling Joan is like handling the ghost of Dan. There ain't nothing we can do for her. Our work is ended, Harry."

Harry shook his head.

"I can't give her up," he said. "And the farther she is away from me, the more I want her. Buck, I've got a plan that may sound crazy, but it's one I'm going to stick to."

"Lemme hear it."

"I'm going to join MacArthur's gang. That way I'll be close to Joan while she's with them. And when she leaves, I leave. And suppose that you, Buck, hung around in the office and waited for a chance. I don't know what might come up, but there's always a chance, you know. Two men can do a lot. You and I might be able to get Joan away. Does it sound good to you?"

"To me," murmured Buck, "it sounds like fool talk."

He added: "But I was always nice to you myself. If you want to take the big chance, I'll take the little one. But nothing will come out of this but a considerable bunch of hell fire for all of us. You mark my words, Harry!"

But the big man could not be moved. He saddled his horse, while Buck did the same and started off down the mountain side to find covert. Gloster himself, mounting, rode straight back through the defile and into the hollow.

Straight to the door of the hut he went.

"Three of us have voted him in," he remarked, "and there's three that want him to stay out. I'm one of them, and you vote, and vote again, and that vote is to—"

"Wait a minute," broke in Gloster as he saw the tide turning against him. "I've got something to add."

He went to the end of the room and leaned over a projecting rib of limestone which the foot from the fire had only succeeded in turning gray. Over this he bent, held hold upon it with his hands, and began to lift.

But the rock was lodged deep in the earth, and that earth had been tramped solid as stone itself. Yet he increased his effort instead of giving up his purpose, whatever that might be. The members of the gang gathered to watch, half in wonder and half in appreciation.

For they needed no scales to tell them that Gloster was attempting to budge a great weight. Even the mass of stone which projected above the ground appeared more than any one man could stir and there was an unknown portion of the whole mass hidden from sight, besides which, it was fixed in its place.

The others were much interested in the effort of Gloster. Their faces worked with the pain of sympathy and their hands closed. He had sunk to a half-crouching position, now. His back bowed with the immense pressure.

Now his shoulders began to rise. His head bowed between them and his swelled neck was purple with congested blood.

He sank a bit lower. The ground was not particularly moist, but his feet were sinking into it. The soles of his trousers over the bulging thigh parted. Now his whole body jerked up a fraction of an inch—the stone had been budged.

"By God!" whispered some one, "he's winning!"

There was not a man who had not crouched in sympathy, saving only Dud Rainey, who was still rubbing his finger tips across his chin.

"Now!" they muttered in a faint chorus.

For suddenly the stone had risen six inches. They were beginning to guess at the full hugeness of its mass. But it caught again and then with a great wrench, Gloster tore it out. The entire lower section of it was gleaming white, a deep and ragged hole was left in the floor, and walking as though he were carrying a mere armful of wood, Gloster crossed the room and cast down the mass at the feet of MacArthur.

The very ground quaked under the impact. Gloster stepped back, his purple face distorted with the effort. "You were wrong, Joe," he said. "There are four white pebbles instead of three! And I stay in the crowd, eh?"

Whatever hatred MacArthur might have felt for the new applicant, he was swept away for the moment by his enthusiasm for Gloster's physical power. He clapped him heartily on the shoulder.

"Harry," he said, "you're one of us, and as good a one as any!"

MacArthur spoke slowly.

"This gent comes up here," he said, "talking to Joan, finds she don't want nothing to do with him, and then comes begging us to take him in. What he wants ain't action, but just a chance to be near her. Ain't that reasonable? Besides, what I say is that we don't want to have in the gang any skunk that would murder two harmless old soursoups. Am I right?"

"Right!" blurted out Babe Cooney. "Right!" chimed in the others, with the exception of Dud Rainey. The latter, as usual when he was most thoughtful, was rubbing his finger tips lightly over his chin.

"If he killed the two old boys," he said quietly, "we certainly don't want him."

EDISON COMES OUT WITH IDEA FOR WARSHIPS

Suggests Simple Plan to Secure Desired Gun-Elevation.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
New York, Jan. 20.—Thomas A. Edison came out today with a few simple ideas for gun elevation on American battleships at little expense and also for getting work out of the navy's personnel.

Gun elevation could be obtained, he said at little expense by adoption of the paravane principle. The paravane he explained, was a sort of lateral rudder or fin by which a battleship could be tilted to alter the range of the guns, much after the principle used by submarines in diving or coming to the surface. The $5,000,000 sought in the naval appropriation for gun elevation, he regarded as needless.

"A pound of mercury for each ship used with the apparatus, will do the trick," said the inventor. He added that his plan had been sent to Washington and rejected on the ground that it would cause too much retardation of a ship in motion.

Kansas Children to Vote in Election of Representative Bird

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Topeka, Kan., Jan. 18.—School children of Kansas are in the midst of an election campaign. On Kansas Day, Jan. 29, they are to elect a state bird. Out of the big field of candidates "Bob White" is picked to win. He has the endorsement both of Gov. Jonathan M. Davis and of J. C. Mohler, secretary of the state board of agriculture. In reply to questionnaires by the state Audubon society, each official, unknown to the other, recommended the quail.

The women have their candidate, however. "Mrs. Jennie Wren" has been put forth as champion of "women's rights" and is expected to instill some rivalry in the contest. Other leading contenders for the honor whose names have been proposed are the robin, prairie chicken, meadow lark, the cardinal and blue jay.

Throughout the Kansas schools children are now campaigning, familiarizing themselves with the birds and picking the candidate they will support at the polls.

Avoided by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Cal. — "I cannot give too much praise to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me. My mother gave it to me when I was a girl 14 years old, and since then I have taken it when I feel run down or tired. I took it for three months before my two babies were born for I suffered with my back and had spells as if my heart was affected, and it helped me a lot. The doctors told me at one time that I would have to have an operation. I thought I would try 'Pinkham's,' as I call it, first. In two months I was all right and had no operation. I firmly believe 'Pinkham's' cured me. Every one who saw me after that remarked that I looked so well. I only have to take medicine occasionally, not but I always keep a couple of bottles by me. I recommend it to women who speak to me about their health. I have also used your Sensitive Wax and like it very much."

— Mrs. E. GOULD, 4000 East Side Boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal.

"Water Hogs" in Canada Fighting Waterway-Hull

Chicago, Jan. 19.—(By The Associated Press)—Canadian "water hogs" are hiding behind lake carriers in fighting the division of water from Lake Michigan, a lake that does not belong to any government other than the United States, because they want more power, Representative William E. Hull declared in an address prepared for delivery today before the Press Club of Chicago.

The lakes to gulf waterway depends upon a diversion of approximately 10,000 cubic feet a second from the lake through the Illinois river, he said, and although the Canadian government has taken 36,000 cubic feet a second out of the great lakes for power purposes, and the Niagara Power Company principally owned by the Canadian Power Company, has taken 20,000 cubic feet a second, "and still they contend we are not entitled to the 10,000 cubic feet a second."

London Plans Big Garage Like U. S.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
London, Jan. 2.—Another contemplated American innovation for slow-moving and slow-changing old London, is a plan to build a number of super-garages of several stories, and each accommodating from 200 to 500 motorcars. At present there are few large garages in London and few car owners drive in to the city.

Poles Propose to Honor Mme. Curie

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Warsaw—The population of Poland is preparing to raise funds for a national gift to Mme. Curie, the discoverer of radium. The gift will take the form of a radium institute in Warsaw, her native city.

The Malays of Sumatra live under the matriarchal system, with women controlling property and line of descent.

Boils!
Ouch!

S.S.S. will rid you of boils, pimples, blackheads and skin eruptions!

DON'T CLOSE your eyes to the warning which Nature gives when angry, painful boils appear on your neck, face or other parts of your body. Boils, pimples and so-called skin disorders are the result of an impoverished condition of the blood and are not to be trifled with.

It is nothing more than folly to expect to get absolute relief from the use of local treatments, such as ointments, salves, etc. Such remedies may afford temporary relief but you want more than relief; you want a remedy which will rid you forever of the torturing disorders. And the one remedy which has no equal is S.S.S.

S.S.S. stops boils and keeps them from coming. S.S.S. builds blood-power! That is what makes fighting blood. Fighting blood destroys impurities. It fights boils. It fights skin eruptions—pimples, blackheads, eczema! It always wins! S.S.S. has been known since 1825 as one of the greatest blood builders, blood cleansers and system strengtheners ever produced. There are no unproven theories about S.S.S., the scientific results of each of its purely vegetable medicinal ingredients are admitted by authorities. Begin taking S.S.S. today and clear your skin of those blood disorders!

S. S. S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.
